TRAGEDY IS ENACTED IN HENDRICKS COUNTY

Farm Hand, Living Near Danville, in Jealous Rage Shoots Rival in Love Affair.

DANVILLE, Ind., Dec. 23.—Charles Cashdollar, 22, was shot to death as he was driving with Miss Mabel McCormick, by Walter Seward, 21, a farm hand. Seward is in the county jail here. He is said to be a raving maniac today although he never gave any evidence of insanity before. Jealousy, it is said, inspired the tragedy. Miss McCormick will not talk of the affair. Cashdollar was an expert "tree doctor" and had been at work near Danville. His home was in Pennsylvania. When Miss McCormick ceased her attentions to Seward and accepted the attentions of Cashdollar, the rivals are said to have clashed. When the girl and Cashdollar, in the course of their drive, reached a spot about two miles and a half south of Griswold, Seward stopped from behind a tree and opened fire with a shotgun. Seeing her companion fall forward, Miss McCormick whipped up the horse and drove to the home of Eli Parnell. A doctor was summoned but Cashdollar died before his arrival. Seward fled across fields two miles to another farmhouse where he told of the shooting and awaited the arrival of Sheriff Gentry. The only statement he would make was he had not intended to kill his rival.

The prince announced through an interpreter that he had already fallen in love with the United States and would like to live here and be naturalized. His American bride, he said, had become so infatuated with Italy that she was opposed to this plan and so, he added with a shrug of his shoulders, that seemed to denote finality. "We will probably continue to live in Italy." The couple had only two servants, a valet and lady's maid, but brought eight trunks.
